

panel, as Judge Bordwell had a fourth panel drawn this morning to report as soon as served.

With the box practically filled, both sides have about agreed on who shall fall before the peremptory challenges. It is almost certain not more than two men will survive and both sides are still investigating them. They are T. F. Green, capitalist and rancher, Progressive Republican and the original LaFollette booster in this section, and Seborn B. Manning, a bachelor farmer, 62 years old, who is an old school Democrat without any opinion whatever on labor union ethics. His health, however, is bad and possibly, even if not removed by peremptories, he will be eliminated on a doctor's certificate before the trial actually commences.

So far the state has had the worst of the selections, there being four men in the box they probably will have to challenge. These men, Sam F. Mendenhall, wealthy farmer who bitterly opposed Fredericks; Frank Frakes, farmer, and Robert Bain, retired carpenter and Grand Army man, who both incline to the gas theory and favor unions; M. D. McNeeley, retired tailor, who organized the first tailors' union in this city and managed its first big strike here, but who insisted he had no opinion in the McNamara case.

The defense will use not fewer than four of their peremptories on A. C. Winter, butcher, strike-breaker, and admitted foe of labor unions; George W. Johnson, who says all union men are "tramps and bums;" Walter N. Frampton, wealthy farmer, who says McNamara undoubtedly is guilty, but would acquit him if proved innocent, and George W. McKee, who is satisfied that dynamite destroyed the Times, but has no actual opinion of McNamara's guilt.

Darrow is being deluged with anonymous letters threatening him, and saying the "Moss" Enright conviction in Chicago is just the beginning of a country-wide movement to destroy unions and then put the leaders in jail.

Darrow says they would be laughable were it not that he is unable to tell whether the writers are men likely to be summoned for jury duty. He has detectives investigating this matter.

Freezing Tonight.

Get out your last
year's bonnett,
With the ear-
laps upon it,
The time to cuddle up now is due;

Tonight's weather will be freezing,
Get your coat and stop that
sneezing,
And then keep warm clear
through.

The weather man says: Fair tonight, followed by increasing cloudiness Saturday; rising temperature; lowest tonight near the freezing point; increasing southerly winds.
